

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE CHAUCER SOCIETY'S PUBLICATIONS.

To do honour to CHAUCER, and to let the lovers and students of him see how far the best unprinted Manuscripts of his works differ from the printed texts, this Society was founded in 1868. There were then, and are still, many questions of metre, pronunciation, orthography, and etymology yet to be settled, for which more prints of Manuscripts were and are wanted; and it is hardly too much to say that every line of Chaucer contains points that need reconsideration. The founder (Dr Furnivall) began with The Canterbury Tales, and has given of them (in parallel columns in Royal 4to) six of the best theretofore unprinted Manuscripts known. Inasmuch as the parallel arrangement necessitated the alteration of the places of certain tales in some of the MSS, a print of each MS has been issued separately, following the order of its original. The first six MSS printed have been: the Ellesmere (by leave of the Earl of Ellesmere); the Hengwrt (by leave of W. W. E. Wynne, Esq.); the Camb. Univ. Libr., MS Gg. 4. 27, the Corpus, Oxford; the Petworth (by leave of Lord Leconfield); and the Lansdowne 851 (Brit. Mus.). The Harleian 7334 has followed.

Specimens of all accessible MSS of the Tales are now in course of issue, edited by Prof. Zupitza, Ph.D.

Of Chaucer's Minor Poems,—the MSS of which are generally later than the best MSS of the Canterbury Tales,—all the available MSS have been printed, so as to secure all the existing evidence for the true text.

The Tritus Parallel-Text from the 3 best MSS has been issued, (the Campsall MS also separately,) and a 4th MS text of it with the English Boccaccio Comparison.

To secure the fidelity and uniform treatment of the texts, Dr F. J. Furnivall has read and will read all—save some of the Specimens—with their MSS.

Autotypes of most of the best Chaucer MSS have been published.

Dr. E. Flügel is editing the Society's Chaucer Concordance, to be completed in 1900 A.D., the Quincentenary of the Poet's death, when the Chaucer Society will wind up.

The Society's publications are issued in two Series, of which the first contains the different texts of Chaucer's works; and the Second, such originals of and essays on these as can be procured, with other illustrative treatises, and Supplementary Tales.

Messrs Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Charing Cross Road, London, W.C., are the Society's publishers, Messrs R. Clay & Sons, Ltd, London and Bungay, its printers, and the Alliance Bank, Bartholomew Lane, London, E.C., its bankers. The yearly subscription, which constitutes Membership, is 2 guineas, due on every 1st January, beginning with Jan. 1, 1868. More Members are wanted. All the Society's Publications can still be had. Those of the first year and some others have been reprinted.

Prof. Child, of Harvard College, Cambridge, Massachusetts, is the Society's Honorary Secretary for America. Members' names and subscriptions may be sent to the Publishers, or to the Honorary Secretary, W. A. DALZIEL, Esq., 67, Victoria Road, Finsbury Park, London, N.

RIME-INDEX TO TROILUS,

BY PROF. SKEAT.

St. 128 of Book I. is missing in the Campsall MS., in MS. Harl. 2280, and in MS. Camb. Gg. 4. 27. But it is genuine, and occurs in MSS. Harl. 3943 and 2392, in the St. John's MS. (in late hand), and in all the early printed editions. I therefore follow the numbering of the stanzas in the Chaucer Society's print of MS. Harl. 3943, throughout this first book, as against that in the print of the other MSS. The stanzas of which the numbering is thus disturbed are stt. 128—155 of Book I. If the reader does not immediately find the reference, he has only to subtract 1 throughout these stanzas. In the other books, I follow the numbering in the print of the Campsall MS.

The references (to save figures) are given to the stanzas, not to the lines; and the Books are marked I., II., III., IV., V. Thus the ending a, in the rime Criseyd-a, A, occurs in I. 25, i.e. in Book I., st. 25; where it is easily found. Similarly, the ending abbe occurs in labbe and gabbe, in Book III., st. 43; and so of the rest.

Forms within a parenthesis refer to the pronunciation; thus (äze) after 'ase' means that the s is like z. I use ö and è to denote open o and e, and ö and é to denote the close sounds.

The final e is to be sounded IN EVERY INSTANCE; thus the rimes in abbe, ace, adde, age, &c., are all dissyllabic or feminine rimes. A few trisyllabic rimes occur, viz. in arie, arien, edie, erië, evene (perhaps ev'ne), evere, (perhaps ev're), ivere, (perhaps iv're), odie, orië, oriës. The word is forms part of the rime-ending in a few instances; see alles (alle is), ayes (ay is), elles (elle is), ewes (ewe is), inges (ing is), oles (ole is), oules (oul is), ones (oon is), yces (yce is). In such cases, a preceding e is elided; thus alle is becomes all'is. For further information, see the footnotes and the remarks subjoined to the Index.

IV. 72. 166. V. 133. <sup>3</sup>	seen ).

<sup>1</sup> All words ending in é (in Troilus) have the close sound of e, with the sole exception of see, sea (A.S. sē). Owing to the paucity of rimes for it, it forms a permissible rime with other words in é. It occurs in II. 64, III. 2, IV. 222, V. 127, 260. In IV. 147, sē means 'seat.'

<sup>2</sup> Of words in éche, teche has the open e (A.S. tēcan) ; seche and bisecche have close e (A.S. sécan). Other words are eche, v. (to eke), leche, preche, and speche ; (bi)seche, speche are found together more than 20 times.

<sup>6</sup> Here open é seems to rime with close é. In Troilus, it only occurs (in rimes in ede) when one of the words is the sb. drede, dread ; or else, in one case only, when the words are Dionede, hede (heed), brede (breadth), V. 237 ; or else, in one case only, when one of the words is dēde (deed), II. 49. Observe that drede chiefly occurs in supplemental phrases, such as out of drede, I. 111, IV. 11, V. 109. 156 ; or without drede, II. 96. III. 60. 70 ; or for drede, I. 83. II. 107. III. 104. V. 29. For a further explanation of these exceptional rimes, see below.

<sup>17</sup> The é is close, but words are allowed to rhyme with slepe; cf. A.S. sleēpan, by-form of sleēpan, and mod. E. sleep.

<sup>18</sup> Here belong words with open é from A.S. éa and æ: of these, there, were, where still have the open sound, and ear, fear, gear, tear, sb. (lacrumæ) are now spelt with ea. Bere, a bier, is from A.S. bær. In III. 241, enguere has the open e, correctly; see Ten Brink, § 68.

<sup>19</sup> Here belong words with accented open e from A.S. é, which was lengthened. The A.S. forms are beran (to bear), derian (to harm), sworian (to swear), teran (to tear); also bera (a bear), spere (a spear), wer (a weir); hire (M. E. here, i.e. her); styrian (M. E. strieren, to stir). A.S. lēder, a leader, is used in the form lēder-e. Note that, in II. 238, the word here, riming with forbere, must be the acc. of the fem. pronoun, meaning 'her.' It does not mean 'to hear.' The context thus becomes clearer.

to hear), dere (A.S. dëore, dear), of which the three last recur with great frequency. Also fere, variant of fure (A.S. fyr, fire). Also the French words appere, chere, clere, manere, matere, pere (peer), prayer, refere, requere, rivere, spere (sphere). It is interesting to note that spere, a spear, with open e, does not rhyme with the same class of words as spere, a sphere, with close e. Hence, e.g., spere in the Complaint of Mars, 137, has a close e, and must mean 'sphere'; whilst in the Parl. Foules, 185, it has an open e, and must mean 'spear.' (The e in here, to hear, and fere, fire, is variable; see note 21.)

<sup>21</sup> These are the exceptional cases. In I. 33, fere (fire) is rimed with were (were), stere (stir), with open e, whereas it is elsewhere rimed as if with close e. In II. 14, 226, III. 134, IV. 63, V. 23, we find lere (A.S. lærان), which should have open e, riming with here (here), here (hear), and dere (dear). In III. 35, V. 168, yere (year) rimed with dere (dear), here (here); but A.S. has the form gēr as well as gēar. In IV. 169, 173, bere (bier) is treated as if with close e.

chimeneye, ob., pr., purveye. The Scand. word deye (die) rimes with most of these, viz. with aw., l., pl., pr., purv., s., w., tweye. It rimes with seye 20 times. In II. 63, the form dye occurs also, riming with crye and vilanye. Hence the double form dye, deye is established. We may contrast dreye, adj. dry (III. 51) with drye, v. to suffer (V. 6). The word 'high' is hye, not heye.

<sup>34</sup> Exceptional forms. In I. 11. 119, II. 2. 4. 114, do is rimed with open o, as frequently elsewhere (Ten Brink). In II. 24, we find two, dó, þó, where two is put for two by the influence of the w; hence mod. E. two (tuu). In II. 155, we find só, wó, hó; where hó should rather be hó (Icel. hó). In IV. 154, we find hertó, só; where só, for só, is due to the influence of the w in swá. In I. 78 (540), for to read mo, as in Th. H2.

<sup>39</sup> These words sholde, wolde, nolde (ne wolde) are usually rimed together, as if this were preferred to riming them with other words. The only exception is in III. 17 (biwolde, wolde). sholde rimed with wolde and nolde only.

<sup>49</sup> With open o, but originally short, from A.S. ō; viz. bifōre, bōre, pp., forlore, pp., more (a root, A.S. ăōrō), therfore, tofore, wherfore, yshore, pp. Chaucer clearly distinguishes between the long and broad open o (A.S. ă) and the somewhat shorter o (A.S. ō), in V. 4; which stands thus:—

This Troilus withoute rede or lōre,
As man that hath his Ioyes eek forlōre,
Was waiting on his lady evermōre,
As she that was the soothfast crop and mōre

A few peculiar stanzas may be noticed. Thus we find the endings -y and -yé in the same stanza in I. 60, IV. 17, V. 38; and in the last two instances they are used alternately. In III. 27, the endings -yén and -yé occur alternately. In IV. 137, and V. 202, we find, alternately, the endings -eye and -ay (-ey). In V. 3, 4, we have very instructive examples. In the former of these stanzas, we find the first and third lines ending with Dioméde, bléde, with close e; whilst the second, fourth, and fifth lines end with lède, rède, rède, with open e. In the latter, we have the rimes lōre, evermōre, with long open o, and forlōre, mōre, tofōre, in which the o was originally short, and had probably not yet attained its full length. Prof. Lounsbury (Studies in Chaucer, I. 393) calls attention to these stanzas as shewing evidence of carelessness on the poet's part; whereas they prove precisely the contrary. In connection with this subject, the student should look for himself at Anelida, ll. 299—307, where we find a stanza precisely parallel to that in ll. 238—246 above. The rimes womanhēde, dēde, lēde, drēde, sēde, all shew the open e (cf. A.S. -hād, dād, lēdan, drēdan, sēdan); whilst the rimes nēde, bēde, mēde, hēde, all shew the close e (cf. A.S. nēod, bēodan, mēd, hēdan). This looks very much as if Chaucer had anticipated the charge of carelessness as being like to arise, and had prepared a trap for his accusers.<sup>65</sup>

<sup>65</sup> English: agryse, aryse, forbyse, ryse, wyse, sb., and adj. French avysse, covetyse, cowardysse, devysse, v., despysse, disgysse, empryse, gyse, sacrificysse, sb. servysse, suffysse. Note that we now say cowardice, sacrifice, service, suffice; with voiceless s. In III. 199 we find both despysse, covetyse, and nyce, ryce.

<sup>64</sup> In II. 127, if the reading is correct, we fynd syke used as riming with endytte, whyte; which merely gives an assonance. (Read syte, to grieve.)

So again, in IV. 208, we have the rimes stēre (stir, A.S. styrian), bēre (bear), ledēre (leader), as distinct from the rimes dēre, yfēre. In the former set, the e is open, and originally short; in the latter pair, it is long and close.

Yet again, in V. 32, we have dere, clere, with long close e, and where, were, tere (tear), with long open e.

When these peculiarities are properly understood, we may sometimes even gain a clue to the sense intended. Thus, in the last stanza cited, IV. 208, the word stere has an open e, originally short; it therefore means 'stir', i.e. employ, put in practice, and cannot mean steer, or direct, as in IV. 41, where it rimes with manēre and dēre. The scribe of the Cambridge MS. was aware of this, and employs the spelling stire; but the scribe of MS. Harl. 2280 was not aware of it, and alters the word to steere, as printed by Dr. Morris in the Aldine edition, vol. iv. p. 359, where the stanza is misnumbered 204. For a like reason, as already shewn above, the word hēre, in II. 238, must mean 'her,' not 'hear'; in III. 39, the same word hēre rimes with swēre, whilst the very same stanza ends with dēre, yfēre.

<sup>65</sup> I can only here protest, generally, against the inaccuracy of the numerous accusations brought against Chaucer in the work to which I refer. To a large number of the statements there made I take exception altogether; the linguistic and grammatical "facts" are frequently misstated or misinterpreted. At the same time, let me testify to the literary value of the work.

EXPLANATION OF APPARENT EXCEPTIONS.

In the above list, I have purposely drawn attention to apparent exceptions. Thus, to take the case of the ending ede, we have examples of (ède) with long open e, of (éede) with long close e, and a third set in which these two classes of words seem to be confused. It remains to be shewn how such exceptions arose.

As regards close and open e, the endings (èène) and (éène) are never confused in Troilus. The chief cases to be considered are those in which the endings are è, èche, ède, èke, èle, èpe, ère, ète, ève.

Of course, it will be readily understood that, for most of my results, I am indebted to the standard and very remarkable work upon the subject familiarly known as Ten Brink's Chaucer's Sprache und Verskunst; though it is due to Dr. Weymouth to remember that he first called attention to the different sounds of e in his paper on "Here and There in Chaucer"; see Essays on Chaucer, p. 311. But it is one of my points, that a few of the results given by Ten Brink are not to be accepted, as they tell against the author's own arguments. Thus, when he states, at p. 20, that the words clene and lene sometimes appear with close e, it is obvious that, if such were really the case, we may as well give up all distinctions between open and close e at once. These characteristic words are still spelt with ea (clean, lean) in modern English, and the e in them must always have been open. When we look at the evidence, I find (1) that they always have open e in Troilus, and (2) that they do not occur in the Rime-Index to the Minor Poems at all. Consequently, all the evidence is limited to the fact that, in the Canterbury Tales, each of them once rimes with y-sene. And I shall shew below that the e in ysene is variable, and is not to be relied upon as furnishing evidence either way. This is another of my points, viz. that the variable vowel which appears as è and ÿ in A.S., and as è in Mercian, occurs as a variable vowel in Chaucer, and rimes with a long e of either quality.

In order to arrive at the general principles, it will suffice to take a few examples; and I shall further limit the investigation by considering only words of English origin, and disregarding the French ones.

The simple general rule is that the M.E. long open è arises from A.S. èa, or ÿ, or from lengthening of short e, or even of y. There are other sources, duly enumerated by Ten Brink, but these will suffice for my purpose. I shall also leave out of sight for the present the lengthenings of short e, as Chaucer usually keeps words with original short e and y apart from the rest.

On the other hand the M.E. long close ē usually arises from A.S. ē or ēo; and, amongst the values of A.S. ē, we must include the cases in which it is equivalent to A.S. ȳ or ȳe arising from mutation. This last case, however, presents difficulties, as I shall presently shew.

And the general principle is, that words with open ē and words with close ē are not, in general, allowed to rime with one another.

To take a few examples.

In II. 8, we find rede, red, riming with mede, mead, and sprede, to spread. Here the A.S. forms are rēad, mēd, sprēdan; and by the rule, the ē is open in each case. See further instances in footnote 4, p. 8.*

Again, in II. 90, we find steēle, a steed, riming with blede, to bleed. The A.S. forms are stēda, blēdun; and the ē, in both instances, is close. See further instances in footnote 5.

But further search soon lands us in difficulties. Thus, in I. 72, we find the rimes drede, hede, blede. Here drede is allied to A.S. drēdan, and we should expect the ē (apparently from A. S. ȳe) to be open; whilst we are quite sure that in blede (from A.S. blēdan) it is close. This shews at once that the general rule given above is, here at any rate, in fault.

The matter must be looked into a little more closely; and the difficulty will then be found to resolve itself into this. There are (as duly noted by Ten Brink, p. 19) two values of the A.S. ȳe, which must be carefully distinguished. The first, which I shall call stable ȳe, because it regularly produces an open ē in M.E., answers to Germanic and Goth. ai, and is usually due to mutation. Thus sprede, to spread, A.S. sprēdan, answers to a Goth. **spraidjan*, for, although the Gothic form does not occur, we can infer its vowel-sound from comparison with the G. spreiten. It therefore rimes exactly with rēde, red, from A.S. rēad, as in II. 8.

The second kind of ȳe, which I shall call unstable ȳe, because it occurs in forms which are treated both ways in Chaucer, answers to an original Germanic ȳe, Gothic ē, and does not arise from mutation, though it may arise from gradation. Thus the M.E. dēde, deed, A.S. dād, answers to Goth. gadēds, a deed, G. That, and the contrast between the vowel in G. That and that in spreiten, to spread, is very marked. It is from words of this class that all the trouble arises.

If we further enquire, why there should have been any difference of development in such cases, and how the same form should, to all appearances, yield both an open ē and a close one, I believe the answer is really quite clear. For it is in precisely such cases that we find different forms in A.S. and in Old Mercian. Thus, whilst the A.S. form of 'deed' is dæd, it is equally clear that the Mercian form was dēd; see Sweet's O. E. Texts, p. 606. It is perhaps even more to the purpose to note that our mod. E. deed is Mercian, and not Southern, and that is why it is not spelt with ea in Tudor English. Hence Chaucer had, ready to his use, two forms of this word. One was the Southern dæd, with open e, from A.S. dæd; and the other was the Midland dēd, with close e; and, as the Midland dialect was rapidly gaining the ascendancy, he could hardly go wrong if he sometimes used the more popular form. This I believe to be the simple solution of the whole mystery. Chaucer knew nothing of etymology, but he knew how words were pronounced by his contemporaries. In words with ē from A.S. ēa<sup>66</sup> or from stable A.S. ē, the e was ALWAYS open, and he so treated it. In words from A.S. ē or ēo, the e was ALWAYS close, and he so treated it. In words from A.S. unstable ē, i.e. a vowel which remained as open ē in Southern English, but became close ē in Midland, he had a choice of forms; and we cannot be surprised that he took advantage of the fact.

All that remains to be done is to make a list of such variable words, and to set them aside; we shall then have a certain number left of which the pronunciation was NOT, to his ear, doubtful; and such words will form most valuable rime-tests, because, as will appear from examination, Lydgate (to mention no one else) paid not the slightest heed to any such nice distinctions. In fact, we shall never appreciate Chaucer's rimes till we realise that, in respect of them, his language is decidedly archaic. So far from being the first of a new school, he was (as regards his rimes, at any rate) the last of the old school; a fact which has been profoundly disregarded and neglected.

To complete these remarks, I must note that yet one difficulty remains; and it is one which Ten Brink has not explained. Cases occur in which a long e that should be close, appears to be open. There is a capital example in the Prologue, l. 592, where lene, lean (A.S. hlēne) with open e, rimes with yeēne, visible, A.S. gesyne. The explanation is parallel to the case above. There are really two kinds of long e which we should expect to be close. The one is STABLE; viz. the e seen in blēde, to bleed, A.S. blēdan, where the ē arises from mutation of ō, as well as the stable vowel in dēpe, from A.S. ēo in dēop; and there is the UNSTABLE vowel in ysēne, visible. For the

A.S. forms of this word are various; we find gesēne, gesȳne, and gesēne, all three. Of these, gesēne is the earlier form for gesȳne, and may here be neglected; but gesȳne and gesēne remain. Gesȳne is the usual A.S. form, whilst gesēne is Mid-land and Northern; see Sweet, O. E. Texts, p. 608, and the A. S. Dictionary. From the Midland gesēne came M. E. yēne, with close e, regularly; and this is the form which Chaucer usually adopts, though not in the passage here considered. The A.S. gesȳne would have developed regularly into ysyne, with y = long i, just as the A.S. m̄ys became mys, mod. E. mice. But the y-sound was difficult of treatment, as the old sound of it was lost; and Ten Brink has noted the variation in the development of A.S. short y, which became sometimes short i and sometimes short open e. In the same way, I should suppose that this A.S. long y may sometimes have corresponded to long open e; which would make ysēne (with open e) a Southern (probably a Kentish) form. There is a remarkable parallel to this in the development of A.S. fyr, fire. This usually becomes fyr in Chaucer, with long i; but in I. 33, we have the remarkable form fere, riming with were, were (A.S. wēron) and stere, to stir (A.S. styrian), both with open e; indeed, stere, to stir, is really another example of the same development, as the e in it is merely lengthened from A.S. y. This long open ē, corresponding to A.S. long y, is, in fact, Kentish; the form fer occurs in Shoreham, and ver in the Ayenbite of Inwyd.

If we sum up the results thus obtained, we see that, in considering Chaucer's forms, we must set aside, AS UNSTABLE, all words in which long e corresponds either to a Germanic ē (Gothic ē, German ā), or otherwise to A.S. unstable ȳ (Mercian ē). It remains to enumerate the chief of these, as occurring in Troilus. See footnotes on pp. 8*—12*.

Eche. The verb ēche, to eke, answers to A.S. ȳcan. Leche, a leech, is allied to Goth. lēkeis, a physician. Speche, speech, is from the stem seen in sprēc-on, they spoke, with the same vowel as in Goth. brēkun, they broke. All these words have unstable e.

Ede. Dede, deed; A.S. dād, Goth. gadēds. Drede, to dread, A.S. on-drēdan, O. H. G. trātan. From V. 237, it is difficult to draw any clear inference; brede should have open ē (cf. A.S. brād, Goth. braids); hede, heed, goes with A.S. hȳdan, and its vowel is unstable; and Diomede, though the e should be close, is a proper name, and needs no exact treatment.

Eke. Besides the correct form ēk (A.S. ēac), Chaucer has a form eke, with unoriginal final e; he probably connected it with the verb eche, to eke, in which the e is unstable, as it arose from mutation.

Cheke answers to A.S. cēace, Anglian cēce, mod. E. cheek; but here the ēa is not the usual A.S. ēa, being merely due to the initial c, and the Germanic type is **kākā* (New E. Dict.) whence the A.S. original form **cēce*; so that the e is unstable, by the rule above given.

Ele; ene. Rimes in ēle and ēne are all regular. See also ēne, ēmeth. The rimes in ēmen are imperfect.

Epe. Slepe has unstable e; cf. Goth. slepan.

Ere. Unstable e occurs in ferē, fire, as explained above; also in here, to hear, A.S. hyran, hēran. Also in yere, year, because the ēa in A.S. gēar is not the usual diphthong ēa, but due to the preceding g; the Goth. form is jēr, so that the M. E. e is unstable, by the rule. Bere, a bier, is from the verbal stem bēr-on, corresponding to Goth. bērun; hence the e is unstable.

But a real difficulty occurs in the riming of lere, to teach, with here, here, and dere, dear. Lere, A.S. lēran, Goth. laisjan, should have the open e; but it here rimes with words in which the e is close. This is one of the exceptional words noted by Ten Brink (Chaucer's Sprache, § 25). No explanation is offered, and I know of none, unless it be that it was confused with lere, cheek, from A.S. hlēor. But we must note the fact.

Ete. The exceptional words are bihete, mete (to dream), strete, street. Bihete is really a false form for bihote (A.S. bihātan); the e is due to confusion with the pt. t. bihēt, where hēt is for A.S. hēht, the result of contraction; hence the e is doubtful and unstable. Mete, to dream, is from A.S. mētan, of unknown origin; hence we may regard the e as doubtful. Strete, a street, answers to A.S. strēt, Mercian strēt, mod. E. street; hence the e is unstable, as explained above.

Eve. Ten Brink (Ch. Studien, §§ 25, 23), thinks that leve, sb., leave, was treated as if with close e by confusion with bileven, to believe, which, he says, has close e. Whatever be the right explanation, we must set aside leve, leave, as an exceptional word. So also eve, eve, A.S. ēfen, Mercian ēfen, has a variable vowel; see Sweet, O. E. Texts, p. 602.

Having now considered the doubtful cases, which may be altogether set aside, it remains to draw up the list of words in which the quality of the long e, at least in Troilus, admits of no doubt. The result gives us a valuable set of test-rimes, by which the genuineness of a poem attributed to Chaucer may be investigated. Of course, a few divergences may admit of explanation; but the presence of a large number of them should make us extremely suspicious.

The list is as follows.

(A) The following words (in Troilus) have open e only. (I omit some doubtful cases, in addition to those discussed above; and only give those which ought certainly to have the open vowel.)

teche, to teach.

dede, dead; lede, lead (the metal); rede, red. Also lede, to lead; sprede, to spread. The other words in ede are doubtful.

breke, to break, speke, to speak, wreke, to wreak, have open e; but it was originally short, and these words are kept apart from others.

bene, bean; clene, clean; lene, lean; mene, to mean.

hepe, heap; lepe, to leap.

there, there; were, were; where, where. Also ere, ear; gere, gear; tere, a tear. (Fere, fear, has unstable e; cf. G. Gefahr.)

bere, to bear, dere, to harm, swere, to swear, tere, to tear, besides bere, a bear, spere, a spear, were, a weir, here, her, stere, to stir, likewise have open e; but the e was originally short, and these words are kept apart.

bete, to beat; grete, great; hete, heat; spete, to spit, swete, to sweat, threte, to threaten. Also ete, to eat, foryete, to forget; see notes 26, 27. (I omit doubtful cases.)

reve, to reave; greve, a grove. (But leve, to leave, is doubtful.)

(B) The following (in Troilus) have close long e only.

forbede, to forbid; ned, need; yede, went. Also bede, to offer, blede, to bleed; brede, to breed; fede, to feed; glede, a glowing coal; spede, to speed; stede, a steed.

bitwene, between; grene, green; kene, keen; quene, queen; tene, vexation; wene, to ween.

kepe, to keep; wepe, to weep; also depe, deep.

Of course, the rime-tests consist in this, that not one of the words in class A can possibly rime with one of those in class B, either in Troilus or in any genuine work of Chaucer.

To test this, we must first refer to Cromie's Rime-Index to the Canterbury Tales, under the headings, eche, ede (eede), eke, ene, epe, ere, ete, eve.

The only apparent exceptions that I can find are two; and they are worth notice.

Under eepe, we are told that leape, 3 s. perf., rimes with kepe, n. obj. The reference is to Group A. 2688. When we look, we find that the Ellesmere MS. has wrong spellings; the words should be leep, keep. Or rather, we find that the final e is not real, but only represents a meaningless flourish in the MS. Now it is a neat point of grammar that, although lepen, to leap (A.S. hlēapan) has an open e, its past tense (A.S. hlēop) has a close e; so that the rime is quite correct. In both words, the e is close.

The other case (A. 1422) is worth citing. Mr. Cromie says, at p. 108, that here, adv., rimes with the inf. bere, to bear; which is, in my view, impossible.

The lines run thus:—

"He fil in office with a chamberleyн,
The which that dwelling was with Emelye.
For he was wys, and coude sone aspye
Of every servaunt, which that serveth here.
Wel coude he hewen wode, and water beie."

This is a case where the sound decides the sense. The e in bere is properly short; hence the same is true of here. Accordingly, here is not an adverb, nor does it mean 'here'; it is the personal pronoun, A.S. hire, and it means 'her'; precisely as it does in Troilus, II. 238.

In the Minor Poems, the following passages are the only ones that I can find that present any difficulty.

In the Death of Blaunche, 1253, we find need riming with heed (head); so that need has here apparently, an open e. Ten Brink has noted this exception (at p. 20), and explains it by remarking that there is a double form of the word in A.S., viz. nēad as well as nēod. At any rate, we see that the word nēde cannot be relied on as a test-word, and must be struck out; though there is only this one example of its use with open e.

In the Death of Blaunche, 773, we find dere (dear) riming with were, were. This, again, is exceptional. We might say that, as A.S. wāron answers to Goth. wesun, the e in it is unstable. But once more, viz. in Clk. Ta. 882, we again find were riming with dere; and, after all, dere (see below) has unstable e. The Death of Blaunche presents many difficulties, and the text of it is far more uncertain and unsatisfactory than that of any other genuine poem.

In the House of Fame, 1885, we find the rime here (here), lere (to teach). This only shews that lere is here once more used with the close e; I have already said (p. 26*) that it is no sure test-word.

I just note the rime of here (here) with were (perplexity); H. Fame, 980. Were is of F. origin; and several such words have the close e; see Ten Brink, p. 48.

In the Legend of Good Women, 1870, we have the unusual rime there (there) with dere (dear). Ten Brink has noted this (p. 20). He remarks that it is the only example in which there seems to have close e ; but it is rather one of three cases in which dere has open e (from A.S. dȳre). See p. 28.

These are all the difficulties which I could find, after a search through the Index to the Minor Poems. The only modifications they suggest are these : the word need is once found riming with heed (head) ; and the word dere (though it usually has a close e) really has unstable e (A.S. dȳre, dȳre).

It is interesting to apply the results to other Poems.

The beautiful Roundels entitled Merciless Beauty answer the test surprisingly. In the first stanza, the author uses the rimes sustene, kene, grene, quene, sene, where all the vowels are close, if we include sene, which has the variable e (close in Midland). In the second stanza, the rimes are pleyne, cheyne, feyne, atteyne, pleyne, all of French origin, in which the sound is slightly varied to that of the nearest diphthong. And in the third stanza, we find lene, bene, mene, v., clene, mene, s., in which the e is now open.

In the poem called A Complaint to his Lady, the final stanza of which, with Chaucer's name appended, was discovered by Dr. Furnivall after I had claimed it for Chaucer, every rime is entirely perfect, and many of them are highly characteristic of him, being used elsewhere very freely.

The poem which I have called An Amorous Complaint has every rime perfect, except in l. 16, where the author rimes do (with close o) with wo, go (with open o). But do rimes with go in Troilus, I. 11, and II. 114, and with wo in Troilus, I. 119; see footnote 34.

This shews one side of the argument. It is instructive to turn to a piece like The Complaint of the Black Knight, which we now know to be Lydgate's, as printed in the Aldine Chaucer, vi. 235. In the very first stanza we find white riming with brighte and nighte, which, to the student of Chaucer, is sufficiently astonishing. Other non-Chaucerian rimes are seen in pitously, malady (st. 20), where the form should be maladye, and the same error occurs in st. 27 ; in ageyn, tweyn, peyn (34), where the latter forms should be tweyne, peyne ; in for-juged, excused (40), which is not a true rime at all ; in yureke, clepe (41), a mere assonance ; in feithfully, cry (65), where I cry should rather be I cry-e ; in wreche, with short e, riming with leche, seche (68) ; seyn, peyn (for peyn e, 82) ; went (for went-e), pt. t., shent, pp. (93) ; peyn (for peyn-e), ayeyn (93) ; quen-e, dissyllabic, seen (miswritten sene), monosyllabic, (97). Here are twelve difficulties in the course of 97 stanzas ; but there are more behind. For the test-words already given above would alone suffice. In st. 4, we find swēte, sweet, paired off with hēte, heat ; in st. 18, we find grēne paired off with clēne ; and in st. 86, we have rēde, red, paired off with spēde, to speed. That is, we have here three exceptions in the course of 97 stanzas, being more than can be found in the whole of Chaucer's genuine works put together. In fact, the indiscriminate riming of close and open e is a capital test for Lydgate and for work of the fifteenth century. Using this test alone, we should see cause to suspect The Flower and the Leaf, which has three false rimes of this class, viz. ête, to eat, swête, sweet (st. 13); bête, pp. beaten, actually riming with the pp. set (31); and gréne riming with cléne (42); not to mention that the author makes the dissyllabic words wene, grene, rime with the pp. seen (36); and again, grene, tene rime with the pp. been (56); and yet again, grene rime with the pp. seen (57), and with been (77). ON THIS POINT ALONE, the author differs from Chaucer SEVEN times!

The Court of Love differs from Chaucer in instances too many to enumerate; but, as to this particular point, I only observe the riming of gréne with cléne, l. 816; and of dére with require, l. 851; but we may alter require to the Chaucerian form requere. At l. 79, we find the dissyllabic grene; it rimes with the monosyllable been.

Similar tests apply to open and close o, for which see the Index. We might arrange these, similarly, into two classes, viz. (A) with the open sound, and (B) with the close sound; and we should find that they do not rime together; i.e., if we first eliminate those words which are observed to be of a variable character. I give the list below.

It is also curious to observe that, in Troilus, the words wolde, nolde, sholde, usually rime together. Wolde rimes with biholde once only, III. 17; but sholde never rimes with any words but wolde and nolde. In the Cant. Tales, wolde rimes with several words; but sholde only with wolde and nolde. The only exception is in the Book of the Duchess, 1200, where sholde rimes with tolde. It would greatly improve the sense as well as the metre to substitute wolde for sholde in this passage.

Another point I wish to mention is the distinction, in Chaucer, between the voiceless and voiced sounds of s in certain words. Thus he has vyce, vice, with the c as at present; and, contrariwise, ryse, rise, with s as z, also at present; but in certain words his usage is just the opposite of what it is now. See footnote no. 63. This peculiarity may also, perhaps, serve, in some instances, to detect spurious poems.

Now that I have exemplified the mode of using these test-words, I give fuller lists, slightly augmented by help of Mr. Cromie's Rime-Index, and adding a third class (C) of words which have a variable vowel, and are therefore not available as test-words; for it is useful to know the character of these also.

The following is THE KEY to the meaning of the lists.

1. (A) contains words with open long e and open long o. The chief sources of open long e are (a) A.S. ēa and (b) the stable A.S. ā answering to Goth. ai (O. H. G. ei) and usually due to mutation of A.S. ā. We may include words with A.S. short e, though these often keep the vowel somewhat short; perhaps it was only half-long.

The sources of open long o are (a) A.S. ā and (b) a lengthening of A.S. short o; perhaps the latter was only half-long.

2. (B) contains words with close long e and close long o. The chief sources of close long e are (a) A.S. ēo and (b) A.S. ē. The chief source of close long o is A.S. ō.

3. (C) contains words with variable long e and variable long o. The chief source of variable long e is the unstable A.S. ā answering to Gothic ē (G. ā); this ā occurs in sprēc-on, third stem of the strong verb sprecan, and in its derivative sprēce. It also appears to arise from Mercian ē, corresponding to A.S. ē, ȳ, mutation of ēa, ēo.

RESULTS. Words in (A) rime with each other, but never rime with words in (B). Words in (B) rime with each other, but never with words in (A). Words in (C) rime with words both in (A) and (B).

ede. (A) dēde, dead, hede, head, lede, lead (metal), rede, red, spredē, to spread. (B) bede, to offer, blede, v., brede, v., crede, fede, forbede, glede, nede*, spede, v., stede, a steed. (C) dēde, deed, drede, s. and v., hede, to heed, rede, to advise. Words in -hede almost always shew open e, but a few exceptions occur.

eke. (A) brēke, v., spēke, v., wrēke, v., avrēke, yvrēke, with short e; leke, leek. (B) meke, seke, v., seke, sick, biseke.

ene. (A) bene, bean, clene, lene, adj., mene, to mean, unclene. (B) bitwene, grene, kene, quene, tene, vexation, wene, v. (C) sene, adj., visible, y-sene (the same), shene, bright.

epe. (A) chepe, to buy, hepe, lepe, v., stepe, bright. (B) crepe, v., depe, kepe, wepē. (C) slepe.

ere. (A) bēre, a bear, bēre, to bear, dēre, to harm, ēre, to plough, hēre, her, spēre, spear, stēre, to stir, swēre, to swear, tēre, to tear, wēre, a weir, wēre, to defend; all with (original) short e. Also ere, ear, gere, gear, tere, tear; and there,† were,‡ where. (B) dere,§ dear, fere, companion, here, here, yfere, together. (Here belong the common F.

* Nede once occurs as need, riming with hēd, head, B. Duch. 1253.

† There once rimes with dere, adj., Legend, 1870.

‡ Were twice rimes with dere, adj., B. Duch. 773, Clk. Ta. 822.

§ Dere usually has close e (A.S. dēore); but it also rimes with there, were; see above, and cf. A.S. dyre.

words chere, clere, manere, matere.) (C) berē, bier, fers, fear, here, to hear, lere, to teach, yere, year; see p. 26.*

ete. (A) bete, to beat, grete, great, hete, heat, spete, to spit, swete, to sweat, threte, v., wete, wet, ybete, beaten. Also ēte, to eat, foryēte, to forget, mēte, meat (originally with short e). (B) bete, to mend, flete, to float, grete, to greet, swete, sweet. (C) bikete, to promise, forlete, to let go, lete, to let, mete, to dream, shete, sheet, strete, street.

eve. (A) bireve, deve, pl., deaf, greve, grove, reve, to reave. (B) leve, dear, reve, a reeve. (C) eve, eve, leve, to believe, bileve, belief, leve, to permit. Note that yeve, to give, usually rimes with live, to live, as in mod. English.

o. All words in o seem to rime together; of these, to, therto, unto, do, fordo, should have the close sound.

olde. Nolde, sholde, wolde, usually rime together. Occasionally wolde rimes with other words. In only one case does sholde rime with tolde (B. Duch. 1200), where wolde would make better sense.

one. (A) alone, echone, bone, bone, grone, to groan, lone, loan, mone, to moan, one, one. (B) bone, boon, eftsone, mone, moon, sone, soon. (C) done, to do. [Note that sōne, son, wōne, to dwell, are really written for sune, wune, and only rime with each other.]

onge. [Note that songe, pp., spronge, pp., tonge, yonge, are really written for sunge, sprunge, tunge, yunge. They rime together, but are quite distinct from fonge, honge, longe, stronge, wronge; just as in mod. English.]

oot. (A) boot, he bit, goot, goat, hoot, hot, noot, know not, smoot, smote, woot, know, wroot, wrote. (B) foot, moot, must, soot.

ore. Before, bore, pp. born, forlore, pp., more, a root, shore, pp., swore, pp., therfore, wherfore, originally had a short o, and usually rime together. Hore, pl., hoary, lore, more, rore, sore, yore, have open long o, and usually rime together. In a few cases, words in one set rime with words in the other.

ote. (A) grote, groat, hote, hot, throte, throat. (B) bote, satisfaction, fote, rote, root, swote, sweet.

In conclusion, I offer these lists for what they are worth. I believe them to be fairly correct; but I do not suppose that they are altogether free from blunders. Some peculiarities may have escaped my notice; and some of my references may be incorrect, owing to natural human imperfection.

Sample Tale from all the other MSS of the Canterbury Tales. As many Chaucer Students have often wanted to know what kind of text was contained in the MSS of the Canterbury Tales other than the Seven printed by the Chaucer Society—the Ellesmere, Hengwrt Cambridge Gg, Corpus (Oxford), Petworth, Lansdowne, and Harleian 7334—the Director resolved to get printed a sample Tale from all the accessible MSS of the Tales.<sup>1</sup> He wished to have The Wife of Bath's Prolog and Tale, because they show the most variations, but as Prof. Zupitza, who most kindly volunteered to classify the MSS and edit their sample Tales, objected to the subject of the Wife's Prolog, the Director proposed The Pardoner's Prolog and Tale (which apparently showed the next number of changes of reading), and Prof. Zupitza accepted this Prolog and Tale. He has accordingly classified all the MSS, and has edited the Pardoner's Prolog and Tale from the seven which are of the Cambridge Dd type (more or less near the Ellesmere), and from the next ten, representing several small groups. The others are the Petworth and the Corpus types, &c., will follow in due course.
